The final conference was an event to raise awareness of career advising for disadvantaged groups.

The two project partners were active in debating and stimulating the conversation about topics relevant to career guidance.

The event was opened by M.M.C. that introduced the project and its objectives.

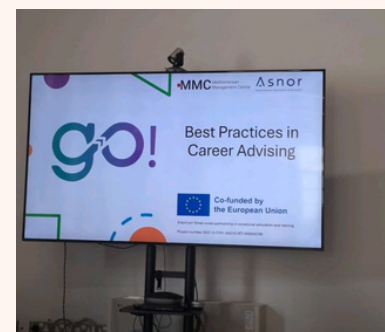

Then, the project coordinator talked about the identification of key skills and skill mismatch, and described the EU Frameworks related to Skills and Competencies.

After a short break, ASNOR described some best practices in career advising and stimulated the conversation by introducing meaningful words about career guidance, such as “VUCA”, “employability”, “competencies”, “relations”, “mindsets”, “IKIGAI”, “antifragility”, “artificial intelligence” and “sustainability”.

The event ended with the presentation of the project platform and its key features.

In the last session, group discussion and networking took place.
